With you by our side, PIH is proving that quality care can and must be accessible to all people—starting with those most marginalized by illness and injustice. As the data on these pages shows, our work in 2021 not only remained steadfast—it grew. Following the roadmap drawn by Dr. Paul Farmer, together, we delivered health care and hope to more patients and their families than ever before; trained and mentored another generation of health professionals; and further strengthened fragile health systems. This next year and beyond, we will build on this progress, in honour of Paul and on behalf of everyone we serve. From all of us at PIH, thank you for helping us create a healthier, more just world for all.

Over 3 MILLION outpatient visits

Across the globe, clinicians at PIH-supported health facilities provided care for conditions ranging from HIV to malnutrition to malaria.

Over 2 MILLION home visits

PIH community health workers met patients directly at home to connect them to medical care and social support and to offer a listening ear.
As we grapple with the loss of our founder, Dr. Paul Farmer, we reflect on the clear vision he left us: to build on 35 years of mobilizing staff, stuff, space, systems, and social support and continue pushing the envelope of what is possible in health care and human rights. We are grateful to our steadfast supporters for continuing to be our trusted partners as we carry forward Paul’s legacy together.

Patrick Ulysse, chief operating officer, PIH

With COVID-19, ensuring equitable access to health services has become a constant challenge, even more so in countries that lack resilient and sustainable health systems. We are committed to partnering with governments and communities to strengthen our health systems through increased human resources, infrastructure, facilities, medical supplies and technology, and social support. Your generous commitment to PIH means we can guarantee the right to health globally and prove that injustice does have a cure.

Daniela Puma Abarca, TB program coordinator, Socios En Salud (PIH Peru)

A strong team of community health workers (CHWs) and social support programs can make a world of difference to patients. Whether they’re conducting routine home visits, screening for COVID-19, providing meals, or accompanying patients to PIH-supported facilities, our CHWs play a key role in addressing the barriers that prevent the most vulnerable patients from accessing quality care. Thanks to your support, we’ll continue to build on our progress breaking the cycle of poverty and illness.

Kumba Tekuyama, community-based programs manager, PIH Sierra Leone

Photo by Mego Brahmsteit / PIH
A YEAR IN PHOTOS

Throughout 2021, we met unprecedented challenges with grit, innovation, compassion, and as strong a dedication as ever to health care as a human right. Here are just a few highlights of our lifesaving work:

PERU | January 2021
Sol Prieto connects with clinicians about her toddler’s health using the CASITA chatbot, one of the seven mobile health apps PIH developed to easily connect patients with care.

HAITI | August 2021
Patients injured in the August 14 earthquake in southern Haiti arrived via air ambulance to University Hospital in Mirebalais, where they received specialty emergency care.

SIERRA LEONE | February 2021
Saffiatu Sesay, 27, was cured of multidrug-resistant tuberculosis at PIH-supported Lakka Government Hospital. Inspired by this care, she dreams of becoming a nurse.

MEXICO | August 2021
Gladys Arias Ruiz received inpatient care for COVID-19 and successfully recovered from the virus. Upon discharge, she was walked out by nurse Carlos Coello and met by her husband.

CANADA | November 2021
Dr. Paul Farmer visited with staff at Auduzhe Mino Nesewinong, an Indigenous-led COVID-19 testing, vaccination, and support program in Toronto.

RWANDA | December 2021
The first cohort of medical students at the University of Global Health Equity celebrated their white coat ceremony, signifying the start of their clinical rotations.